- It is a dynamic time to be a senior university leader. Some argue that higher education is at a tipping point and as a result, the very foundation and fundamentals of our higher education system are poised for transformation and significant change. Tuition costs have outpaced wage increases. Student debt has been rising. Calls for accountability are increasing. The return on investment of a college education is being called into question. New entrants and disruptive innovations abound. In order to navigate our institutions of higher learning through the challenges and opportunities that exist today, and in the future, effective leadership is critical. During this case study-based session, we'll step out of education and into healthcare to take an intimate look at leadership during a period of industry and organizational change and transition. This case "Paul Levy: Taking Charge of the Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center" details the situation Levy inherited, his negotiations prior to taking the job, and his first six months as CEO. *NOTE – Participation in this session requires a pre-reading exercise, Paul Levy: Taking Charge of the Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, which will be distributed to all attendees pre-registered for this session track and available in the session room. Seaport C, The Seaport Hotel Mezzanine Level

Value. Outcomes. Quality. These are hot button words in higher education today. More than ever parents, students, accreditors, employers, government and the general public are focused on outcomes as college loan debt levels continue to rise. However, despite this reality, we still fail to have a common framework and method for assessing quality. Too often, the manner in which assessment is conducted at universities today is largely inadequate for truly driving meaningful programmatic improvement. During this session, we'll provide frameworks to assist you in measuring outcomes in a comprehensive and forward-thinking way and drive thinking about how to enhance and communicate institutional effectiveness.

Too often information about student learning outcomes is viewed only at the program level, impeding an institution-wide view that can support broader change. This discussion will focus on the challenges in using insights about student learning outcomes gathered via assessment to drive decision-making about program investments and change. During this session we will provide an overview of the barriers to improving this process and strategies to overcome them.
